I. Meeting with deputations

[LC Paper Nos. CB(2)1857/01-02 and CB(2)1895/01-02]

The Chairman welcomed the representatives of the organisations and individual persons to the meeting to exchange views with members of the Subcommittee on the proposed accountability system for principal officials. He said that the written submissions received by the Subcommittee had been circulated to members before the meeting. He invited each of the deputations to make a brief oral representation on the proposed accountability system.

2. A summary of the views of the deputations was attached in the Appendix. Representatives of the Government Mod 1 Staff General Union and New Territories General Chamber of Commerce indicated that they did not have any comments on the proposed accountability system.

3. The Chairman invited questions from members of the Subcommittee.

4. Ms Emily LAU thanked the deputations for expressing their views on the proposed accountability system. Referring to the submissions made by the deputations attending the meeting session from 11:00 am to 1:00 pm, Ms LAU said that the majority of the views expressed in support of the proposed system were very similar as if they were the views of the same person.

5. Mr CHAN Sze-chung said that he was disappointed at Ms LAU's remark. He said that the Subcommittee should appreciate and respect the efforts made by the deputations in preparing their submissions and presenting their views to the Subcommittee. Ms LAU said that she had every respect for the deputations and had listened to their views carefully throughout the meeting. Mr NG Leung-sing said that the Subcommittee respected every view submitted by the public for the Subcommittee's consideration.

Powers of the Chief Executive (CE)

6. In response to the question from Mr TAM Yiu-chung on whether the accountability system would centralise powers in the hands of CE, both Mr TSANG Heung-kwan and Mrs LAI IP Po-ping opined that such a situation would not arise. Mr TSANG said that the accountability system would not increase the powers of CE which had clearly been specified in the Basic Law. Mrs LAI added that the proposed system would increase the transparency of policy making as the principal officials were required to explain government policies clearly to the public.

Principal officials under the proposed system

7. Mr Andrew WONG said that he supported the suggestion from Mr CHAN Yan-chong that each Director of Bureau should be assisted by a Deputy Director. He requested the Administration to consider this proposal.

8. Referring to the concerns expressed by the Senior Non-Expatriate Officers Association that the appointment of principal officials from outside the civil service might give rise to a situation of "non-professionals leading the professionals", Mr James TIEN said that under the existing structure, many government departments were already headed by "non-professional" Administrative Officers. In his view, recruiting able persons from outside the civil service who possessed the required experience and expertise in the respective policy portfolios as principal officials under the accountability system might not lead to a scenario as depicted by the Association. On the contrary, it could improve the governance of Hong Kong.

9. Mr KWOK Chi-tak responded that the stance of the Association was that it would be in the public interest to appoint as Directors of Bureau or Heads of Departments persons with professional knowledge and expertise in the relevant fields to enhance the Government's ability in formulating long-term policies and handling policy blunders if they occurred. Mr WONG Hyo pointed out that while non-professional officers might be handicapped with insufficient professional knowledge in overseeing the operation of the departments in the execution of policies, professional officers might also lack the management skills necessary for the effective supervision of departments. He said that to address the problems, the Hong Kong Chinese Civil Servants' Association had all along been urging the Government to enhance training for civil servants at all levels.

10. Regarding the question from Mr James TIEN on whether or not the principal officials should have the power to deploy and dismiss civil servants (including the Permanent Secretaries) working under them, Mr KWOK Chi-tak opined that the existing system worked well and should continue to be adopted under the new accountability system.

11. Ms Emily LAU referred to the statement made by Ms YU Kwei-chun that many people she knew of were in support of the accountability system. Ms LAU asked whether they knew that the principal officials under the proposed system would in practice be accountable to CE alone, but CE did not have a popular mandate of the people of Hong Kong because he was not elected by universal suffrage. Ms YU Kwei-chun responded that as the principal officials would need to take into consideration public opinions in formulating policies and they would also be required to explain the policies to the public clearly, Government's accountability to the public would be greatly enhanced under the new system. Mr TSANG Heung-kwan said that the principal officials under the new system would be people dedicated to serving the people of Hong Kong. In his opinion, the principal officials would be accountable to the public through CE, who had a decisive role to play in their appointment.

Secretary for the Civil Service (SCS) and the civil service

12. Ms Emily LAU expressed concern about the worries of members of the disciplined forces that the civil service would be politicised under the accountability system and the disciplined forces would not be able to continue to maintain law and order in an impartial manner. Mr MAN Sai-kit said that members of the disciplined forces had to abide by the specific rules and regulations in carrying out instructions from their superiors. They were worried that politicisation might force them to compromise their integrity, probity or impartiality in the discharge of their duties in a way which might prejudice the public interest.

13. Mr Michael MAK Kwok-fung asked whether the Hong Kong Chinese Civil Servants' Association supported the proposal to have the post of SCS filled by a political appointee, in view of the concern expressed that it would affect the political neutrality of the civil service. Mr WONG Hyo responded that the Association had no objection to the proposal. He said that civil servants needed not be too concerned about the office of SCS being filled by a political appointee, provided that the Government could enhance communication and establish a good partnership relationship with civil servants at all levels so as to win their cooperation and support.

14. Mr Andrew WONG considered that the concern about the impact on the political neutrality of the civil service was a genuine one. He suggested that the Administration could draw reference from the system in the United Kingdom (UK). He pointed out that the UK Prime Minister (PM), as Minister for the Civil Service, was responsible for central coordination and management of the civil service. The PM was supported by the Head of Home Civil Service who was a senior career civil servant. There was also the system of the independent Civil Service Commissioners responsible for appointment matters. These served as institutional safeguards to protect the interests and political neutrality of the civil service. Mr Andrew WONG also drew members' attention to a written submission from Dr Eliza LEE of the Chinese University of Hong Kong (LC Paper No. CB(2)1854/01-02(20)) in which Dr LEE had suggested measures to safeguard the political neutrality of the civil service.

15. Mr LEUNG Chau-ting said that members of the Hong Kong Federation of Civil Service Unions shared the concern that the political inclinations of SCS under the accountability system would affect the interests and political neutrality of civil servants. They were also worried about the possible shrinking of the civil service establishments at lower levels as a result of the restructuring of bureaux and departments under the new accountability system.

16. In response to Mr YEUNG Yiu-chung, Mr Eden WOON and Mr TUNG Wai-ming said that the proposed system would not encourage a culture of "shoe-shining" in the civil service. Mr WOON opined that the civil service would remain meritocratic under the existing reward and disciplinary system.

17. Ms Emily LAU requested Ms WAN Kwai-fong to clarify her remarks that the civil servants had not cooperated well with CE and failed to provide the latter with the necessary support for the execution of government policies. Ms WAN said that her remarks were evidenced by the serious blunders in the past few years which were caused by the failure on the part of the civil servants in implementing policies faithfully. She believed that with the principal officials being held accountable for their success or failure of their policies under the accountability system, policy formulation and implementation would be much improved.

18. Ms Emily LAU opined that confused and inconsistent policy instructions from the highest echelon of Government were also a cause for past policy blunders.

Permanent Secretaries

19. Mr MA Fung-kwok sought the views of the Senior Non-Expatriate Officers Association on whether the Permanent Secretaries should assist the principal officials to "sell" government policies to the Legislative Council (LegCo) and the public. Mr KWOK Chi-tak commented that this would be an acceptable arrangement. He said that policy Secretaries under the existing system were performing this duty. However, he stressed that with the implementation of the new accountability system, the duties and responsibilities of the principal officials and Permanent Secretaries should be clearly defined.

20. Mr Andrew WONG requested the Administration to clarify the following writing -

- (a) whether there would be a Permanent Secretary working to the politically appointed SCS under the accountability system; and

- (b) whether the Permanent Secretaries would be required to "sell" government policies and how they were to carry out such duties.

The role of LegCo in the proposed system

21. In response to the questions from Ms Emily LAU and Mr Michael MAK Kwok-fung on whether LegCo should play a role in the appointment and removal of principal officials, Mr Eden WOON said that Hong Kong should not simply copy the systems of other countries. He added that the mechanism for the appointment and removal of principal officials had been clearly stipulated in the Basic Law and should be strictly adhered to. He considered that LegCo and the media would continue to play an important role in monitoring the Government and the performance of the principal officials.

II. Date of next meeting

22. The next meeting of the Subcommittee would be held on Tuesday, 14 May 2002 from 8:30 am to 12:45 pm.
23. There being no other business, the meeting ended at 1:00 pm.

Subcommittee to Study the Proposed Accountability System for Principal Officials and Related Issues

Meeting on 11 May 2002

Summary of views expressed by organisations/individuals on the proposed system

LC Paper No. of written submission	Organisation/ Individual	Overall comments on the proposed system; Consistency with the Basic Law (BL); The function, composition and operation of the Executive Council (ExCo); Splitting, merging and retention of bureaux	Principal officials under the proposed system; Civil Service under the proposed system; Relationship between bureaux and departments; Review of advisory and statutory/public bodies and implications of the proposed system on their roles and functions
1.	Hong Kong Federation of Civil Service Unions (No written submission provided)	(a) The necessity to implement the accountability system by 1 July 2002 is in doubt. It is desirable to allow sufficient time to assess the impact on the civil service, which has already undergone reformatory changes since the reunification.	(b) Not in support of the political appointment of the Secretary for the Civil Service (SCS) for fear that the interests and political neutrality of civil servants will not be adequately protected.
2.	Disciplined Services Consultative Council (Staff Side) CB(2)1895/01-02(01)		(a) The political neutrality of the civil service may not be maintained under a politically appointed SCS with political inclinations; and  (b) As civil servants strive to safeguard their interests, the civil service may be forced to become politicised. In the end, the interests of civil servants may be sacrificed as a result of the political "tussle".
