(2) Hon Fred LI (Oral Reply)

According to a household health survey jointly conducted by the Department of Health ("DH") and the Department of Community Medicine of the Faculty of Medicine of the University of Hong Kong, some underweight people are still trying to reduce their body weight. Another survey has also revealed that among 40% of the respondents who are secondary students, many have tried to reduce their body weight by methods detrimental to health, resulting in eating disorders in some cases. In addition, a survey conducted by the Consumer Council ("CC") has revealed that most of the body-slimming advertisements contain exaggerated and misrepresented information. However, as the Beauty Industry Code of Practice drawn up by CC has no legal effect and is intended only for voluntary compliance by the industry, it can hardly serve to protect the public. In this connection, will the Government inform this Council whether:

- (a) DH plans to follow up the findings of the above household health survey; if so, of the main target groups and the estimated amount of expenditure to be incurred; if not, the reasons for that;
- (b) DH and other relevant government departments will take measures to strengthen their efforts in preventing and treating eating disorders; and
- (c) it plans to respond to the findings of the CC's survey by tightening the regulation of body-slimming advertisements, including requiring all claims made in such advertisements to be supported by substantiated evidence?
