

Dear Sir,

As a concerned keeper of birds and parrots and poultry I hope that the Hong Kong government will not take too many repressive measures and thus slaughter many birds unnecessarily.

Parrots in particular aren't easily susceptible to avian flu. If parrot owners and poultry owners keep their birds indoors there is no risk of catching avian flu from wild birds and thus it is unreasonable to cull these pet birds at great personal loss to their owners

Pet birds should not be needlessly culled.

yours respectfully
Dorothy Schwarz