Small class teaching

On behalf of the Panel on Education, I write to seek your views on small class teaching. The Panel discussed the progress of a study on small class teaching at its meeting on 12 February 2007. The study was launched by the Education and Manpower Bureau in the 2004-2005 school year. According to the Administration, the evaluation of the study will be completed by the end of 2008 and it will map out the way forward for small class teaching having regard to the outcome of the study.

Members agreed at the meeting that the Panel should write to ask whether you support the implementation of small class teaching.

I look forward to your early reply.
