Existing Procedures Governing the Erection of a High-voltage Overhead Power Line

Policy support to a power company's proposed new transmission system. Consultation on the power line alignment recommended in the route planning study.	Power company's route planning study. For high-voltage overhead power line projects, Government will set up a steering group comprising Government officers, representatives from the power company and its consultants. For projects having potential impacts on the environment, environmental impact assessment is conducted
Finalise the overhead power line alignment taking into account the view of the public and relevant bodies. The affected land-owners can claim compensation under the Electricity Networks (Statutory Easements) Ordinance or ex-gratia compensation from the power company.	The Governor in Council approves the Electricity Networks (Statutory Easements) (Application of Ordinance) (Consolidation) (Amendment) Order to give the power company the easement right over the affected land to do works.
	Resumption of land for pylon sites under the Crown Lands Resumption Ordinance on behalf of the power company.
Affected persons can object to the works under the Electricity Networks (Statutory Easements) Ordinance before the power company exercises its statutory easement rights to do work.	Commencement of works.