Dear Madam Chairman

Progress Report on the Formation of the City University Court

Following the report of the Director of Audit in 2003, the University decided to establish the University Court. The Court is covered by University Statute No.5; a copy of the Statute, as it existed in 2003, is attached for information.

The Statute required that the Chancellor, i.e. the Chief Executive, should preside at meetings of the Court. However, the University was advised at that time that the Chancellor would not be available to chair the meetings of the Court. Consequently the University decided to invoke the provision in the Ordinance to seek the appointment of a Pro-Chancellor who, with the delegated authority of the Chancellor, could exercise the powers and duties of the Chancellor. The University was informed in December 2004 that Dr Norman Leung was appointed as Pro-Chancellor from January 2005. He will Chair the Court in the absence of the Chancellor.

The Statute covering the composition of the Court calls for 20 members to be appointed by the Chancellor on the recommendation of the University Council. The University duly submitted a list of names to the Chancellor for his approval. For various reasons the full list of names was not approved, for example it was considered that there were too few female nominees in the list. A total of three submissions of nominees have been made and the University is awaiting the result of its most recent submission of five names to complete the process.

There were other technical reasons for not being able to establish the Court as quickly as the University wished. For example in October 2005, the Administration advised that the Court could not be formed since their legal advisor opined that there was a legal requirement for all categories of membership proposed in the Statute to be present when the Court was formed.

Since the proposed constitution included 5 members nominated by the Court itself, the University was faced with a "Catch 22" situation, i.e. the Court would not be legal if there were no members nominated by the Court but such members could not be nominated and appointed until the Court was formed. The composition also included the Chairman and 12 members of the University Convocation which, at that time, had yet to be formed and organized. The University therefore sought the approval of the Council to amend the Statute to remove the category of members nominated by the Court itself and the members coming from the Convocation so that the Court can be formed.

The remaining five nominations have recently been submitted for approval by the Chief Executive. If the names are approved, the Court will be formed forthwith and it is intended to hold its first meeting early in the New Year.

Yours sincerely
