

Opinion on the legislation to enhance protection for consumers against unfair trade practices

In the interest of consumers, merchants must display the transaction fee charged by credit card companies, and any clauses prohibiting the cost of payment by credit card must be deemed illegal. This allows consumers to make a fair choice between cash and credit card payment.

Paul Zimmerman
Member, Southern District Council
20.10.2010