

Dear LEGCO:

I strongly believe that Hong Kong government should ban ivory, I like elephants but, Look I know that ivory is precious and expensive, though what is the point of getting ivory if you kill animals for it?

People get ivory for medicine, they trust that if you drink a medicine that contains ivory, it will make you live longer. But does it really have this effect? Have you ever seen it effect before? No probably not right? So getting ivory is a load of rubbish.

People around the world use ivory for necklace and structures, they only looks beautiful, but do they have to kill an elephant or a mammal just for that? Well they thought that they have the right to do this.

I even support the Hong Kong government's proposed in penalties for wildlife crime, because they killed the elephants and traded it to other countries.

I oppose the Hong kong government paying compensation to the Hong Kong ivory traders for their ivory stock. If we pay the ivory traders then they will probably still keep some of the ivory and traded it to other people.

If we don't stop this, these mammals will extinct one day. There are jobs around the world that you can do. Why do they trade ivory's for money then?

So we must not kill elephant just for ivory. We must ban ivory and save them!

Sincerely,
LucasLu