Internet Learning Support Programme

The Internet Learning Support Programme (ILSP) has been implemented since 2011. One of its objectives is to facilitate non profit-making organisations (NGOs) in progressively developing a long-term operating model within the funding period to provide continuous support on Internet learning to needy students. Having accumulated experience over the years and established good relationships with the beneficiary families and students, the two NGOs implementing ILSP intend to continue to provide Internet learning support services to students from low-income families after ILSP ends, and are currently looking into the scope of services and related details.

Moreover, to support needy students in respect of Internet learning at home, the Student Finance Office and the Social Welfare Department will continue to provide Subsidy for Internet Access Charges for eligible families. The Government has been providing free Wi-Fi services at all 69 public libraries in Hong Kong, and also subsidises around 170 study rooms and youth service centres operated by NGOs to offer free Wi-Fi services, to facilitate Internet learning by students outside schools.
