Dear Clerk to Panel on Development,

I would like to make a formal submission to The Panel on Development on the topic of "Studies related to artificial islands in the central waters".

My concerns about this study include:

- the future of the already very endangered Chinese white dolphin.
- the environmental impact on our oceans.
- the loss of the very special natural beauty of our islands - more roads, more cars, more people. Can we not just leave our earth alone?

Regards,
Aruna Chainani

My concerns about this study include:

A huge waste of public money for unclear return values.

Not feasible to spend such huge sum of money just to benefit a small group of people.

The fallout for the land reclamation is disastrous on the surroundings. It is very irresponsible action on the part of the Government of the day.

The benefit is not immediate. Its too long a wait for people who need housing now.

We do not need any more huge infrastructure. We need immediate basic solutions.

Subject: Submission on Studies related to artificial islands in the central waters

Dear Clerk to Panel on Development

I would like to make a formal submission to The Panel on Development on the topic of "Studies related to artificial islands in the central waters."

My concerns about this study include:

- This proposal sidesteps the fact that the land currently owned by the government is not thoughtfully planned or used at all. There is no shortage of land. There is a shortage of political will to develop existing land for public housing rather than selling it off at a profit to private developers. There is no will to meaningfully endorse existing lease conditions, take action against illegal occupation, develop meaningful plans for the existing land bank and use brownfield and other sites for anything other than temporary storage of vehicles.
- The proposed cost estimate of HK$1 trillion will not be met. There will be endless cost overruns, draining Hong Kong's fiscal reserves, worsening the social injustice in the allocation of public funds.
- Large scale land reclamation will cause irreversible environmental and ecological damage, as well as adversely impact other regions and species.

Please shelve this proposal and adopt meaningful and realistic land use planning.

Sincerely,
Melanie Moore

Subject: Submission on Studies related to artificial islands in the central waters

Dear Clerk to Panel on Development

I would like to make a formal submission to The Panel on Development on the topic of "Studies related to artificial islands in the central waters".

My concerns about this study include:

Conservation/Ecological impacts:

- lack of hope for any kind of future for the Chinese White Dolphin and Finless Porpoise populations whose numbers are rapidly declining and are close to everlasting extinction.
- the reclamation will encroach on the foraging grounds of the white-bellied sea eagles and impact on their breeding success as well as cause destruction to coral habitats that are of research interest related to climate change.
- Reclamation is ecologically devastating both to the natural area where the sand comes from as well as to its destination. This is one of the largest proposed reclamation projects in the world and the amount of sand required will cause significant ecological harm.
- There is the potential that the connectedness of islands will bring invasive species to prey upon rare species only found on these islands (e.g. the Bogadek burrowing lizard)

Economical:

- the livelihoods of local fishermen will be at risk due to permanent loss of fishing grounds.
- the proposed costs of the project are shortsighted and a huge gamble with little evidence to suggest that this kind of long-term plan for HK will be required in the future. The cost of reclamation sand has doubled in the last year and its intermittent availability has slowed existing projects. There is little experience/knowledge of using construction waste as an alternative fill material. Recently we have seen the collapse of wave-barriers around the Zhuhai-Macau bridge islands where construction waste was used.

Climate Change:

- the long-term success of this project would be in jeopardy due to rising sea levels
- It is necessary that the HK Govt should first complete a carbon audit to carefully assess the carbon footprint of building the artificial islands before going ahead with this project as is HK's commitment under the Paris Climate Agreement.

This massive artificial island on reclamation land will completely lock sea areas without any natural sea current. Sea fauna and flora species with lack of oxygen and natural current condition to develop their system. They will disappear and will be destroyed. Still waters will bring more problems to sea species. This massive project is a massacre to the natural environment, Why to create such Environmental problems? Lantau Island has been declared a unique territory of Hong Kong for its natural quality. We need to preserve its environmental quality, its natural environment.

Please don't make any decision before knowing what you are destroying.

Dear Clerk to Panel on Development

I would like to make a formal submission to The Panel on Development on the topic of "Studies related to artificial islands in the central waters".

My concerns about this study include:

-I am worried about the pollution because animals that live in the sea and people may get sick and it may cause death.

-The Chinese pink dolphins are already under threat and this may cause them to be extinct.

I would like to make a formal submission to The Panel on Development on the topic of "Studies related to artificial islands in the central waters".

My concerns about this study include:

- The Chinese White Dolphin has already had its habitat reduced because of developments like the bridge to Zhuhai and Macau.
- Lots of plants and animals live in the area that you are going to develop.

Please leave our oceans alone!

. There is too many reclaimed land in Hong Kong. A lot of fish is getting killed because of this reclaimed land and if you do make more of this reclaimed land a lot of Chinese dolphins and fish are living there and if you make reclaimed land the dolphins and fish will die and this can cause bigger fish dying because the smaller fish are dying.

.Life is so short and you sure wont want to waste time making reclaimed land !!!□

We are a group of passionate Year 6 boys who are inquiring into marine pollution to discover sustainable environmental solutions in our community. When our teacher informed us about this land reclamation project, we were devastated to learn that the government would ignore all the serious consequences of this project.

These are the points that are troubling us with this project:

- Irreversible effects to marine life such as the destruction to the habitats of the Chinese White Dolphins, White Bellied Sea Eagle and the Rare Sea Pen.
- Potential mass destruction due to rising sea levels and extreme weather conditions.
- Is it necessary? The population of Hong Kong is predicted to shrink and therefore it is careless use of our precious marine life.
- Have you considered the effects of stronger tides? This could be dangerous for marine traffic.
- From our research, we have discovered that there are 736 hectares of brownfield in HK. The reclamation would only provide approximately an extra 380 hectares of land and with extreme damage to our environment at the substantial cost of $500 Billion Hong Kong Dollars. Is it really worth it?

In conclusion, and after careful consideration of the facts, we passionately believe that we should use the brownfield sites to build public housing flats due to the financial and environmental costs that the reclamation will cause.

Dear Clerk to Panel on Development,

I would like to make a formal submission to The Panel on Development on the topic of "Studies related to artificial islands in the central waters".

I am a student from ICHK and I really do not think building artificial islands in the central waters is a good idea, this is because of many reasons including the Chinese white dolphins, the number of Chinese white dolphins left are critically low. And I am very sure that if you do build these artificial islands they will become extinct, Imagine the whole human population gone because some other species wanted a bigger world! This is the same with the White Dolphins. I think Hong Kong is good the way it is and does not need more land.

Thank you,

Subject: Submission on Studies related to artificial islands in the central waters

Dear Clerk to Panel on Development

I would like to make a formal submission to The Panel on Development on the topic of "Studies related to artificial islands in the central waters" within context of the Lantau Tomorrow Vision.

I am a Hong Kong citizen, resident, taxpayer and parent of two children under 6 years old. I am a registered voter for the Southern District and the Legal functional constituency. I want my children to grow up in a strong and stable Hong Kong, Greater Bay Area ("GBA") and World which is better in every way than it is right now.

In my view, the Lantau Tomorrow Vision has an exciting possibility - as a pilot to achieve a transformation to ecological civilization.

1. Principle of ecological civilization for Lantau development

The GBA has a current population of 68 million forecast to reach 100 million by 2035. It is already the biggest Bay Area in the world. How can it also become the most valuable and productive?

In my view the answer is clean air, clean water, jobs, housing, education, entrepreneurial opportunity and access to nature. This will nurture good citizens and 21st century knowledge workers. This is the principle of a transformation to ecological civilization. It follows the 13th Five Year Plan, the Greater Bay Area Plan, Hong Kong 2030+ Plan and the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals.

Right now, every major financial and industrial city is struggling to achieve ecological civilization according to carbon emissions, air quality, water quality, population health, crime and other indicators. For example the PM2.5 for Central London exceeds WHO safety levels and violent crime is starting to rise.

GBA is unique for its size, as well as its location within the Indo-Burma Biodiversity Hotspot. By pursuing ecological civilization GBA could become the pre-eminent example in the world of Green-Blue Urban Development. In fact Hong Kong and the GBA already have an advantage due to the world leading public transport network and valuable natural assets.

It follows that the principle of ecological civilization must be applied to the Lantau Tomorrow Vision. It should underlie the stated goals of providing adequate housing and recreation for residents of Hong Kong and the GBA. We should chase this opportunity is to showcase to the world, through technology and innovation, that zero carbon emissions green-blue growth is possible by nurturing a transformation to ecological civilization in the GBA starting from Lantau.

2. Evaluating and capitalizing on the environmental assets of Lantau

Based on the principle of transformation to ecological civilization of GBA, the value of Lantau is as a carbon sink for the GBA, last remaining green wilderness, country park and is an undervalued asset as such. It also incorporates a little-studied marine wilderness in the GBA for species in South China including the endangered Chinese White Dolphin and Finless Porpoise, which are iconic symbols of the Pearl River. It is important to conduct scientific and economic appraisal of the ecosystem and cultural services of Lantau for GBA to incorporate into planning.

Within the GBA, my view is that Lantau has a role to be preserved and further restored (including re-introducing species such as incense trees, Chinese pangolin etc) as a unique South China National Park and City Level United Nations Biosphere Reserve. A Biosphere Reserve is a framework with exclusion zones for conservation, but also includes zones permitting recreational/ economic use of the protected area as pilot for sustainable development. Lantau could incorporate some planned, restricted areas of low environmental impact, high tech, creative/ knowledge worker industry. One example is the Lake District, UK which is protected as a famous national park but contains thriving industry and innovation.

The creation of a South China National Park and City Level UN Biosphere Reserve should be the focus of the Lantau Conservation Fund. Further funding could be raised through Government issuing Climate Bonds for long term international institutional investment (see Climate Bonds Initiative standards for land use and forests).

Meanwhile, in my opinion it is not appropriate to develop Lantau into a third CBD for Hong Kong when other cities in the GBA are in greater need of investment for upgrading commercial and residential infrastructure, especially with view to low carbon building.

3. Objection to Land Reclamation in Lantau & Opportunity for Low Carbon Climate Resilient Brownfield Development

Hong Kong has struggled with land supply and Hong Kong has succeeded many times in the past to expand through land reclamation including Hong Kong's Waterfront and building one of the world's busiest and best airports on Lantau.

But in 2018 the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change released their aggressive new Climate Goals. The story of a 16-year old girl, Greta Thunberg, protesting against climate inaction dominated the past World Economic Forum at Davos and global attention. There is a global realisation for the need to shift towards low carbon development and investment. Premier Li Keqiang has called this a phase of “high quality growth”, under the concept of “new urbanisation” which is compact, green, low carbon and smart urban development.

The circumstances have reached a tipping point in 2019 meaning that the principle of ecological civilization and role of Lantau in GBA, land reclamation is would no longer be a favourable solution to the problems posed by housing and recreation in Lantau and GBA. In my view, proceeding now despite the recent shift in global and national policy would reflect badly on Hong Kong as a sophisticated economy and negatively impact the economic development of GBA, and ability to attract and retain skilled knowledge workers.

To meet housing needs the panel may consider brownfield redevelopment in Hong Kong ex Lantau and wider GBA. There is a supply side shortage of suitable climate bonds as institutional investors are pressured to move towards investment in low carbon products. The Climate Bonds Initiative has a clear framework for low carbon building development (commercial and residential) which could be applied towards brownfield redevelopment in Hong Kong ex Lantau and wider GBA. This supports Hong Kong's development as a global financial capital for green financing.

Such climate bonds could also make financing available for low carbon tourism and recreation infrastructure on Lantau including waste treatment (sewage, compost, recycling etc) facilities, renewable energy, network of cycling trails, beach facilities, as well as towards maintenance of South China National Park and City Level UN Biosphere Reserve.

In Summary:

- The development of Lantau can be used as a catalyst in the transformation to ecological civilization of the Greater Bay Area.
- However there has been a global tipping point in the past six months in view of the new IPCC targets, as well as aggressive new national targets on emissions, and national recognition of the need for high quality growth and new kind of urbanisation.

- The need for housing should be shifted to brownfield only sites in Lantau, Hong Kong and adjacent GBA cities, land reclamation should now be avoided at all costs. This pivot would be applauded globally.
- Investment should be diverted to upgrading other cities in GBA for low carbon development.
- Further capital for low carbon brownfield development and development of low carbon recreational and tourism infrastructure or low carbon forestry and land use can be raised through District-level, Hong Kong or GBA issued Climate Bonds. There is supply side shortage globally.
- Lantau can be made into a unique and ambitious South China National Park and internationally recognised City Level UN Biosphere Reserve supporting sustainable, low impact, high tech industry.
- The overall outcome would be a transformation to ecological civilization and high-quality growth of world's biggest and greenest Bay Area, while meeting or exceeding Hong Kong and GBA's targets on urban carbon emissions.

Thank you for considering my views. Should you require further information please do not hesitate to contact me.

Subject: Submission to Panel on Development on Studies related to artificial islands in the central waters

Dear Clerk to Panel on Development

Please record this email as my formal submission to The Panel on Development on the topic of "Studies related to artificial islands in the central waters".

I urge the Panel on Development of LegCo to reject this proposal for the following reasons:

1. The government is trying to mislead the people of Hong Kong about the true nature of this project as has been demonstrated by the clever trickery of associating it only with the Lantau area e.g. East Lantau Metropolis; Lantau Vision Tomorrow, so that people living elsewhere in Hong Kong are deceived into believing that it is not a Whole of Hong Kong issue.
2. The key reason for building the artificial islands around Kau Yi Chau is to "capitalise on Lantau's geographic advantage" to create a new transport network connecting cities in China with Hong Kong. The need for this new network of roads and railways between China and Hong Kong has not been researched or proven. This proposal amounts to using a substantial proportion of Hong Kong's fiscal reserves to singlehandedly fund a symbolic link with China. The Paper (PWP Item No. 768CL - Studies related to Artificial Islands in Central Waters) even states that these transport links "would otherwise not have a case" if the artificial island (which is not needed for land or housing) were not constructed.
3. The Paper makes frequent reference to the report of the Task Force on Land Supply (TFLS). This self serving body and its associated reports have no credibility as the Task Force was specifically selected to represent those who would benefit from the development of Lantau and any independent or objective contributions were suppressed.
4. The Paper tries to justify donating HK$1 trillion of its people's money to overseas developers and construction companies with banal cliches about the public "living and working in contentment and improving our livelihood". These trite feelgood statements are insulting to our Legislators and the people of Hong Kong because they are cynically aimed to distract attention from the complete absence of concrete measures to address the Territory's real social needs.

5. Hong Kong is not short of building land. Three of the city's developers hold undeveloped banks of former agricultural land in the New Territories with a combined area of 859 hectares. Unused military sites and former industrial sites could also be developed without the need for costly reclamation or "triggering the long-drawn land resumption and clearance process" so feared by the authors of the Paper in front of you. Hong Kong is not short of housing. Hong Kong currently has more than 200,000 empty homes.

I urge LegCo panel members to reject this proposal in its current form.

Subject: Submission on Studies related to artificial islands in the central waters

Dear Clerk to Panel on Development,

I would like to make a formal submission to The Panel on Development on the topic of "Studies related to artificial islands in the central waters".

I have major concerns about how the Lantau Tomorrow project will impact Hong Kong's marine life. It is well known that dredging and reclamation produce toxic waste which pollute the waters. This is not only bad for animals living in the harbour but also humans who swim in it.

Firstly, the Chinese White Dolphin is already known to be at 'near threatened' status; the irreversible damage caused by the Lantau Tomorrow project would be the nail in the coffin for the species. Not only do we have a moral obligation to protect these animals, I would have thought Hong Kong Government would recognise that these creatures generate a lot of tourism interest and income. People won't pay to see them if we kill them off! Do you really want the extinction of a gentle, friendly and well-loved animal on your conscience?

Moreover, I'm not sure it has been considered whether the city can actually cope with such a sudden and enormous increase in population. For one thing, the people of Hong Kong already consume an enormous amount of seafood - there is no way a decreased amount of damaged sealife is enough to sustain an increased human population.

Hong Kong already has an enormous carbon footprint; I think it's high time the government took some responsibility for the long term impact they are having on the planet right now. As a teacher here in Hong Kong, I only want the best future for my pupils. That includes living in a world where people take care of the planet and live sustainably. At school the children are constantly discussing how to achieve this, having recently studied and taken action on the UN global goals. Don't you think you should be setting an example to these young people? Their future is in your hands, and this development is not a step in the right direction. I sincerely hope you will consider my points and withdraw the Lantau Tomorrow submission.

Subject: Submission on Studies related to artificial islands in the central waters

(See attached file: LEGCO Public Consultation.docx)

Dear Clerk to Panel on Development

I would like to make a formal submission to The Panel on Development on the topic of "Studies related to artificial islands in the central waters".

My concerns about this study include:

- LEGCO's Public Hearing, Speak up against Artificial Island Studies - Submission

We are submitting our views against the "Studies relating to artificial islands in the central waters, by LEGCO's Panel on Development.

The plan is unbalanced in regards to conservation of natural land, animals and resources. We feel your data leans towards the benefit of contractors and the business sector, which has no consideration for the true needs of the Hong Kong people. Natural parks, mountains and beaches have been overshadowed by greed, investment and unregulated tourism.

The government continues to say Hong Kong people are in support of this plan but these statistics should be made public to insure no corruption is already taking place. Knowing a bit about land supply, in our eyes, land that has been abandoned or held by the Heung Yee Kuk for example, would be a good source of brown land to develop. To go the easy way and try to develop green zones, makes us wonder how much money the government has spent on its study so far and who has put the developers interests first.

The East Lantau Metropolis project will not solve the crisis the Hong Kong people are facing. Poor planning in previous projects shows the government does not put its own citizens' needs first. The HZMB bridge is a prime example of a constant debacle with over spending, poor quality and safety issues during construction, that continues to cause the overflow of mainland tourists into Hong Kong. Damage to natural areas and species during construction and after by tourists due to poor planning is a prime example. The residents of Lantau Island face mounting pressure daily due to issues of over development, poor planning, unlimited tourism and environmental damage.

The face of the government is transparent with large areas of land being sold to developers and investing into such areas where overpriced flats sit empty all over Hong Kong, many which are bought by Mainland citizens for investment. How can the Hong Kong People trust you to help the poor that need housing? The government doesn't even provide enough help for the poor and elderly on a daily basis, leaving it to NGO's. Infrastructure for the needy and middle class must be built not just buildings! This plan overall benefits the real estate developers fully filling their pockets instead of on the average Hong Kong citizens.

The "public consultation" circus, put on by the government is a mockery to the rights of the Hong Kong people. The consultations are always after the government has made its decisions on the topic at hand. Sadly, pretending to care for the public's opinions when in reality the case is usually closed. More studies regarding the feasibility of the project, public funds used for the project, Hong Kong citizens rights being upheld throughout and environmental impact throughout the development. These things are what must be open to the public on an ongoing basis.

We the Tai O Community Cattle group are against The East Lantau Metropolis Project due to the feasibility of the issues raised above and many more. Perhaps when the Hong Kong Government is able to sort it's daily problems and issues that are ongoing before looking at a huge New project it would be the right step forward.

Hong Kong's future should be open spaces and nature, not MORE concrete jungle that leads to an unsustainable, unhealthy life for its children.

A Concerned NGO, Kathleen Lee Daxon Chairperson
