Cooperation between Hong Kong and other places on juridical assistance in criminal matters

Purpose

This paper briefs Members on the current regime on cooperation between Hong Kong and other places on juridical assistance in criminal matters and seeks Members’ views on the proposals to improve the relevant legislations as are under consideration by the Government.

Background

2. Since Hong Kong’s reunification with the Motherland, the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region (“HKSAR”) Government has been actively promoting cooperation with other jurisdictions on mutual legal assistance in criminal matters (“MLA”) and surrender of fugitive offenders (“SFO”). The juridical assistance network has been expanding through the signing of agreements with increased jurisdictions, with a view to combating crimes and upholding justice. According to the relevant provisions in the Basic Law, Hong Kong may, through assistance or authorization of the Central People’s Government (CPG), maintain juridical relations and make appropriate arrangements with other jurisdictions for reciprocal juridical assistance. The Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters Ordinance (“MLAO”) (Cap.525 of the Laws of Hong Kong) and the Fugitive Offenders Ordinance (“FOO”) (Cap.503 of the Laws of Hong Kong) provide legal basis for cooperation between Hong Kong and other places on MLA and SFO. The two ordinances, effective since 1997, aim at enabling Hong Kong and other places to cooperate in combating serious crimes, pursuing judicial justice in criminal cases and preventing criminals from absconding to elude justice. So far, Hong Kong has signed MLA agreements with 32 jurisdictions\(^1\) and SFO agreements with 20 jurisdictions\(^2\).

3. The above two ordinances have been in force for 21 years, during which there have been a number of serious crime cases in which the culprits have absconded to other jurisdictions to elude justice. A case in point is a homicide case that caused extensive public concern last year. In this case, a Hong Kong resident suspected of murdering another Hong Kong resident in Taiwan has returned to Hong Kong, but the request for sending him to Taiwan for trial cannot be processed due to the limitations of MLAO and FOO (both ordinances stipulate that they are not applicable to any other parts of the People’s Republic of China (“PRC”)). As a result, the court of Hong Kong could only handle the suspected money laundering offences committed by the suspect in Hong Kong, leading to widespread public concern. Apart from the victim’s family who was grief-stricken and wrote repeatedly to and met with HKSARG officials expressing grave concerns about injustice caused by the system’s loopholes, there have also been doubts in the community against the Government’s commitment to combating serious cross-boundary crimes. Having thoroughly reviewed MLAO and FOO, the Government considers that the two ordinances must be amended promptly to plug their loopholes and to protect public safety.

Review

Basis

4. There are two bases on which requests for MLA and SFO can be processed: (a) by adopting suitable “long-term arrangements”\(^3\) (including bilateral agreements or multilateral conventions); (b) by providing assistance on an one-off “case-based” approach (for MLA, individual cases can be handled based on “reciprocity undertaking”\(^4\); for SFO, a “case-based” arrangement can be handled according to an agreement reached with the other party and implementation must be based on an enacted subsidiary legislation for that agreement). As far as “long-term arrangements” are concerned, both contracting parties are engaged in prescribed commitments and responsibilities, and such arrangements help build a more comprehensive cross-territory cooperation network and closer long-term cooperation partnership. Despite the generally good progress in our negotiations with other jurisdictions on long term arrangements, from experience, it takes time (usually at least several years) for such negotiations to complete and relevant agreements to come into effect. Furthermore, the Government has limited capacity to conduct several negotiations with different jurisdictions at one time. All these have made establishing an extensive cooperation network a very lengthy process.

Operation

5. The long-term arrangements under MLAO and FOO have been operating smoothly over the past 21 years, where the persons concerned were protected by all safeguards specified in the two ordinances, namely:

(a) Safeguards on human rights

Which mainly include the following\(^5\):

(i) The crime concerned must constitute an offence in both jurisdictions (i.e. the “double criminality” principle). For

\(^4\) Section 5(4) of MLAO:

"Without prejudice to the generality of subsection (3)(a), a request by a place outside Hong Kong for assistance under this Ordinance shall be refused if -

(a) the place is not a prescribed place; and

(b) the appropriate authority of the place fails to give an undertaking to the Secretary for Justice which satisfies the Secretary for Justice that the place will, subject to its law, comply with a future request by Hong Kong to the place for assistance in a criminal matter.

\(^5\) Refusal of assistance under section 5 of MLAO; general restrictions on surrender under section 5 and order for surrender under section 13 of FOO.
SFO cases, the crime concerned must also be among the offences within the 46 descriptions specified in Schedule I of FOO; cases involving offences outside these descriptions cannot be processed;

(ii) In case of violation of the “double jeopardy” principle (i.e. an offence being tried in one place cannot be tried again in another), the requested party shall refuse the request;

(iii) Requests in relation to offences of a political character shall be refused;

(iv) Requests involving persons being prejudiced or prosecuted/punished on account of his race, religion, nationality or political opinions shall be refused; and

(v) For an offence punishable with death, the requesting party shall assure that such punishment will not be carried out. Otherwise the request shall be refused.

(b) Procedural safeguards

For MLA, apart from the safeguards similar to those set out in paragraph 5(a) above, procedural safeguards are provided mainly under the relevant orders, including those on taking of evidence; search and seizure warrants; production of material, etc; and enforcement of confiscation orders, etc. These warrants/orders will be issued only when the court is satisfied that the legal requirements concerned are complied with. For SFO, major procedural safeguards are as follows:

(i) Upon the issuance of an authority to proceed by the Chief Executive (“CE”), the court shall conduct an open hearing to carefully examine the evidence and circumstances of each case and whether the surrender request fully complies

6 Assistance in Relation to Taking of Evidence and Production of Things under Part II, Assistance in Relation to Search and Seizure under Part III, Assistance in Relation to Production, etc, of Material under Part IV, Transfer of Persons to Give Assistance in Relation to Criminal Matters under Part V, and Assistance in Relation to Confiscation, etc, of Proceeds of Crime under Part VI of MLAO.
with the requirements and human rights safeguards under FOO and relevant arrangement. The person concerned may defend his case and object to his committal on grounds such as non-compliance with the conditions and human rights safeguards as prescribed in the law (including safeguards set out in paragraphs 5(a)(i)-(iv) above). A judge may, after considering the case in accordance with the law, decide whether to make an order of committal. If such order is not made, the person concerned will be discharged at once; if such order is made, CE will then make the final decision on whether an order for surrender is to be made\(^7\);

(ii) The person concerned may also apply for habeas corpus and lodge an appeal if his application is not successful\(^8\);

(iii) If the person concerned makes a torture claim, the surrender will be suspended until the claim has finally been determined and the absence of any torture risk has been confirmed\(^9\);

(iv) Under special circumstances, the person concerned may apply for the court to release him on bail\(^{10}\); or the person concerned may apply for discharge in case of a delay in his surrender\(^{11}\); and

(v) The person concerned may institute proceedings for judicial review against the final order for his surrender.

\(^7\) Procedure under Part 2 of FOO.

\(^8\) Application for habeas corpus under section 12 of FOO.

\(^9\) Order for surrender under section 13 of FOO.

\(^{10}\) Proceedings for committal under section 10(5) of FOO.

\(^{11}\) Discharge in case of delay under section 14 of FOO.
6. We consider that the above procedures and safeguards have been operating effectively over the years. They are in line with international practice and are recognized by other jurisdictions. We consider it not necessary to change these procedures and safeguards lest the current long-term arrangements which are in effect would be affected.

Limitations in operation

7. The Government has reviewed the environment in which MLAO and FOO operate. We are of the view that with rapid social development and globalization, today’s people movement, commerce and business services, assets movement, and application of technologies, etc. are all totally different from those 21 years ago when the two ordinances were first introduced. Nowadays, the costs of cross-boundary crimes and absconding to another jurisdiction to avoid arrest are much lower, and the means to do so are much wider and easier. Having regard to the social development and the MLA and SFO regimes, the major limitations concerning the two existing ordinances are analysed as follows:

(a) Current operation of the one-off “case-based” approach is impracticable

With the current legislative scheme, surrender arrangements must be given effect through the enactment of subsidiary legislation. In the process of LegCo’s scrutiny, the operation on long-term arrangements has been smooth as only the general principles in such arrangements but not individual case details are discussed. However, if LegCo were to scrutinize one-off “case-based” surrender, relevant case details will inevitably be publicly disclosed. Irrespective of whether the personal particulars of the offenders would be made public, it would alarm the offender who would then flee. In subsequent hearing (if the offender is eventually arrested), the offender may also judicially challenge the authority on ground that his case details have been divulged or publicly discussed and his opportunity for fair hearing has been compromised.
In addition, different from the other subsidiary legislation which follows the negative vetting procedures, FOO stipulates that the relevant procedures and orders (inclusive of the arrest procedure) cannot come into effect before LegCo’s scrutiny period expires. In other words, even if a request for individual surrender is received from another place during the scrutiny period of LegCo (i.e. ranging from 28 days at the earliest or 49 days at the latest\(^\text{12}\)), there is nothing that can be done, including provisional arrest, during the scrutiny period. The situation will be further aggravated if the subject is a foreign national who is allowed to remain in Hong Kong only for a short period. As there is no legal authority to detain such a national, he will probably abscond during LegCo’s scrutiny period, and no committal and surrender can subsequently be executed at all. Therefore, the existing arrangement is considered operationally impracticable.

(b) Inability to handle the requests arising from the Taiwan homicide case since the two existing ordinances are not applicable to other parts of the PRC

The two existing ordinances are not applicable to requests for MLA and SFO between Hong Kong and other parts of the PRC, and therefore the requests arising from the Taiwan homicide case cannot be handled, highlighting the inadequacy and shortcomings of the current regime. Thus far, there has been no long-term arrangement between Hong Kong and other parts of the PRC. We propose to remove the limitation in the existing relevant provisions to provide a legal basis for instituting “case-based” MLA and SFO cooperation between Hong Kong and any jurisdictions over the world.

8. In summary, the Taiwan homicide case has highlighted the loopholes in the existing legislative scheme, enabling offenders of serious crimes (such as murderers, rapists, etc.) to seek refuge in Hong Kong without ways and means to handle them. Apart from breaching the \(^{12}\) The scrutiny period will be lengthened to three months if it straddles the end of a LegCo session or dissolution of LegCo.

justice, it also poses serious threat to Hong Kong’s public order and public safety. Therefore we must uphold justice and strengthen cooperation with other places in MLA and SFO at the same time.

Other places

9. According to our research, SFO arrangement on a “case-based” approach has already been in place in the United Kingdom, Canada, New Zealand, Ireland, Malaysia, South Africa, etc., with the aim to address the blank that cannot be filled by standing long term SFO arrangements only. This approach serves the useful purpose of effectively combating criminals and preventing their escape in appropriate cases, without unduly disclosing sensitive, confidential information of suspects prior to arrest or commencement of judicial hearing.

Proposed Amendments being considered

10. Premising on the existing frameworks of MLAO and FOO, we propose that the mechanism for “case-based” cooperation and its scope of application be enhanced. The human rights and procedural safeguards in the two ordinances will remain unchanged. Our major proposals are as follows:

(a) Differentiating the one-off case-based surrender arrangement from the general long-term surrender arrangement under FOO clearly, with express stipulation that the former must substantively in full compliance with the provisions in FOO, and in terms of human rights protection, the former can only be subject to more, not less, limitations to surrender than what is currently required under FOO. As for procedures, with reference to the practice of many countries which have put in place “case-based” surrender arrangements where certificates are issued by executive authorities (such as Secretary of State or Minister of Foreign Affairs), we propose that a certificate should be issued by the CE as a basis to trigger the processing of requests for provisional arrest and surrender.
The certificate to be issued by the CE aims to provide a basis to activate the case-based surrender procedures without alarming the offenders or disclosing the case details in public. With the certificate, a provisional arrest warrant can be applied from the court and the subsequent process can commence to allow hearing and decision by the court. On timeliness and confidentiality, this will better suit the actual operational needs. The certificate, which will form the basis of consent to the activation of procedures, will not imply that the fugitive will be surrendered as the request concerned must go through all statutory procedures, including a detailed hearing by the court for ensuring compliance of the case with various evidential requirements and human rights safeguards set out in FOO. The person concerned will continue to be protected by various court procedures (as mentioned in paragraph 5(b) above).

(b) Amending FOO and MLAO to enable the one-off case-based approach to be applicable to any places with which Hong Kong has not entered into any applicable long-term arrangement. Cooperation under the one-off case-based approach will be superseded by the long-term arrangement once the latter is in place in the future.

Way Forward

11. Members are invited to note the current situation of Hong Kong on MLA and SFO cooperation, and offer views on the proposals mentioned in paragraph 10 above. Subject to Members’ views, we aim at introducing the amendment bill in this legislative year.
